Lisa Willson started at the private Bar in February 2008. Lisa is formally qualified in the area of health and safety having completed a Bachelor of Applied Science (Occupational Health and Safety).

Lisa's practice areas focus on employment law and personal injury. She facilitates mediations for court referred matters under the Fair Work Act 2009.

Lisa is a current Counsel Panel member for the Workers' Compensation Regulator in QIRC matters and a previous Counsel Panel member of WorkCover Queensland.

Lisa is a Nationally Accredited Mediator, through the Resolution Institute. In 2019-2020 she was also a Mediator for the Dispute Resolution Branch with the Department of Justice and Attorney General (Qld).

In 2018 – 2019, Lisa was appointed as an "Official Visitor (Legal)" with the Department of Corrections (Qld). In this role, she independently reviewed Consecutive Safety Orders (CSO), and Maximum Security Orders (MSO) and well as complaints from prisoners across the correctional centres in south east Queensland.

Currently, Lisa's work includes appearing as Counsel in:

- Workplace health and safety matters;
- Actions under the Fair Work Act (Cth);
- Discrimination matters including sexual harassment matters;
- Corporate culpability issues
- Workers compensation appeals (Qld);
- Civil claims including personal injury;
- Disciplinary tribunals;
- general matters in the Magistrates Court (Qld) and the Federal Circuit Court (Cth);

Lisa is also a member of the professional advisory panel at University of Queensland for the Bachelor of Occupational Health and Safety Science Program and has the honorary position of Adjunct Associate Professor within the school.

Since joining the private Bar, her interests have included the areas of industrial and personal injury law. She has been an author of the LexisNexis: "National Work Health and Safety Law" publication for many years.
